Driving Home For Christmas Chris Rea

Driving Home For Christmas

Driving Home For Christmas is a Christmas song released in 1988 by British singer-songwriter Chris Rea. The song was written by Rea and produced by Mike Batt.

The song features a piano and guitar accompaniment, with Rea singing about the joy of driving home for Christmas. The lyrics describe the singer’s excitement as he drives through the snow-covered landscape, passing by trees and houses, and the warmth of being home for the holidays.

Driving Home For Christmas was released as a single in December 1988 and became a hit in several countries, including the United Kingdom, where it reached number one.

The song has since become a Christmas classic, often played on the radio and at events during the holiday season. It has been covered by various artists and has been featured in movies and TV shows.

The song’s popularity has led to it being included in Christmas albums and compilations, and it has been praised for its uplifting message and its ability to capture the spirit of the holiday season.

Driving Home For Christmas has been covered by many artists, including Barbra Streisand, Mariah Carey, and John Denver.

The song has also been used in movies and TV shows, such as the BBC's "EastEnders" and "The Archers" radio serials, and has been featured in various Christmas specials and commercials.

Overall, Driving Home For Christmas is a beloved Christmas song that continues to be enjoyed by listeners of all ages. Its message of returning home for the holidays resonates with many people, and it is a staple of Christmas music playlists around the world.